Pick up from Kempinski Resort at Baie Lazare for a comfortable drive along some of the beautiful deserted beaches of the island, continue along the picturesque mountain Sans Souci road past thick vegetation.

Moving on, admire the spectacular view from the historic ruins of Mission Lodge. The Mission Lodge was previously called Venn's Town and was founded in 1835 by the Church Missionary Society. This was the island's first school which was built for children of the freed slaves who could not return to their homeland and they could speak neither English nor Creole. They chose this site as it was the cheapest land available, at a yearly rental fee of 50 acres for 50 cents at that time! The original painting of Venn's Town which was painted by British artist who visited Seychelles in 1883, Marion North, hangs in the North Gallery in Kew Garden, London.

The Clock Tower or Lorloz as it is better known in Creole is a prominent feature located in the centre of Victoria. While all around massive transformation has taken place in the town centre, the Clock Tower has remained virtually unchanged. The Clock Tower is an elegant replica of the clock that was first erected in London in 1897 at the junction of Victoria Street and Vauxhall Bridge Road, near Victoria Station. Seychelles' governor Sir Ernest Sweet-Escott, who had admired it during a visit to London, ordered a similar clock for Seychelles as a memorial to Queen Victoria, who died in 1901 after a reign stretching over 63 years. Made by Messrs Gillet and Johnson of Croydon, and paid for partly by public subscription, the clock was eventually erected in Victoria in 1903, the same year that Seychelles celebrated its new status as a Crown colony, administered directly by a governor appointed by London instead of from Mauritius.

While making a stop in Victoria, visit also the souvenir shops and explore the colorful market of fresh fruits, Vegetables, fish and spices.

The tour in paradise will not be complete without making a brief stop at the view point overlooking the Eden Marina Seychelles whilst smoothly driving back to the Kempinski Resort & Spa
